ABSTRACT

Intended for use as a networking source for microcomputer users, this directory collates the results of a survey on microcomputer usage in school and public libraries in South Dakota that was conducted in the spring of 1990. Entries are divided by type of library. Subsections within the school section are a directory of libraries that report any usage of microcomputers for library management functions and libraries that are utilizing various cable and satellite news programs; an alphabetical list of hardware and software being used for library management functions; a directory of activities for which microcomputers are being utilized (arranged in alphabetical order by function, and then alphabetical order by name of school district or school name in the case of private or Bureau of Indian Affairs schools); a list of CD-ROM products and where they are in use; and a list of schools that are using the major cable and satellite news programs. The public library section is very similar, except that it does not include the list of cable/satellite locations. Accompanying graphs show the major functions for which microcomputers are used in the school and public libraries that participated in the survey. (KRN)

INTRODUCTION

This document is a report of the results of the questionnaire on microcomputer usage conducted last spring. It is larger than previous publications because it includes information for both school and public libraries in South Dakota.

The report has been divided into two main sections by type of library. Within the school section you will find these subsections: a directory of libraries that report any usage of a microcomputer for library management functions and libraries that are utilizing various cable and satellite news programs; an alphabetical list of hardware and software being used for library management functions; a directory of activities where microcomputers are being utilized (arranged in alphabetical order by function, and then alphabetical order by name of school district or school name in the case of private or BIA schools); a list of CD-ROM products and where they are in use; and a list of schools that are using the major cable and satellite news programs. The public library section is very similar, except that it does not have the list of cable/satellite locations.

The following graphs represent the major functions where microcomputers are in use in school and public libraries. It is important to stress that the percentages shown represent that portion of the libraries that returned their questionnaires. It is not a percentage of the total number of school or public libraries in the state.

Please use the document as a networking source to contact other microcomputer users. As computer usage grows, the number of valuable resource persons also grows. Do not be afraid to call someone! Questions about the content or layout of this document may be directed to Donna Gilliland (school libraries) or Beth Marie Quanbeck (public libraries) at the State Library.
